And today's financial tip:

What is an Index?

An Index is a statistical measure of change in an economy or a securities market. In the case of financial markets, an index is essentially an imaginary portfolio of securities representing a particular market or a portion of it. Movements of the index are expressed in terms of a change from a base value, so the percentage change is more important than the actual numeric value. For example, knowing that a stock exchange is at 500 doesn't tell you much, but knowing that the index has risen 30% over the last year to 500 gives a much better idea of its performance
