And today's financial tip:

I have a joint account and I want to remove the other person's name from the account. How do I do this?

There are three ways in which you may remove someone's name from your joint account:

All holders of the account sign the form requesting that the person's name be removed from the account. In other words the person being removed would have to agree to the removal of their name from the account;

Provide the Registry with a valid Court Order stating that the shares now belong solely to you; If the person is dead you complete a Transfer on Death form and submit proof that the person is deceased.
